

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A personal computer is capable of communicating with a portable telephone by radio. A radio communication module establishes a radio link to the portable telephone. A field strength monitor section detects a field strength in a state where the radio link has been established. A power management control section sets the personal computer in a power save state when the field strength detected by the field strength monitor section lowers to a predetermined level.